ALBA DELPORT

I sincerely appreciate your patience and understanding as we navigated the complexities of bringing you our 8th Edition of The Ultimate Career Guide. While we had initially anticipated a timely release, unforeseen circumstances beyond our control led to a delay in our publication date.

We believe that this additional time has allowed us to simultaneously incorporate your valuable insights, suggestions and requests. We could therefore enhance the quality of our content significantly, ensuring that it meets your needs and expectations.

Our commitment to providing you with a comprehensive and effective resource remains our highest priority.

As you delve into this revamped and restructured edition, you will find that it encompasses a wealth of updated information, an improved format to 13 individual sections per set, and new features allowing for easier handling, better accessibility and circulation.

Now, more users can engage with the information at the same time! Teachers can consider dividing learners into smaller groups in which some of the learners are interested in a specific study field – say, one group for medical careers, another for art, another for science, another for social, etc.

It is my sincere wish that our new colourful sections will inspire and motivate learners or students to engage with this edition, prompting them to take charge of the huge, but unavoidable responsibility of owning and planning their futures.

Our electronic version is still presented to you as a single file, with all its amazing search facilities.

As always, The Ultimate Career Guide is updated and expanded with each new edition.

WHAT IS NEW – Sections 1 to 10

- 1) Sections 1 to 10 (Main career categories) – We've integrated specific areas of interest/specialisation within various careers. You will find tailored information that aligns with your interests and ambitions starting opposite page 142. These additional areas of interest or specialisation can be found at the end of each main category, in Roman numerals (i, ii, iii, iv, v and so forth). Much thought has gone into how best bring you this information, since some entries might be considered career paths in their own right. I am, however, certain that you will find this added information extremely useful.
- 2) Section 11 (Career-related information) now lists the undergraduate studies offered by all universities and universities of technology at the end of each entry, starting from page 1 107.
- 3) Section 12 (Index to Careers) boasts an additional section called "Careers worth Exploring", starting from page 1 535 complete with hyperlinks to relevant resources on the World Wide Web (www.), making for engaging, additional and convenient research. For the users of our electronic version, it is a simple click on the (underlined) url. If you prefer using the hard copy of the Guide, please re-type the "url" of the career you would like to know more about, and paste it in your browser.
- 4) Bursaries and Other Financial Aid – We are excited to present this significantly expanded section, now also available as a stand-alone resource. It includes more than 7,000 study fields, listing the various financial aid providers (in Bursaries Part A), along with their contact information (in Bursaries Part B) thereby increasing opportunities for those seeking funding for their further education.

We urge you to read the "Important Notes" at the beginning of this section. The funding organisations and individuals outline a considerable list, number or set of specifications, conditions, requirements and stipulations, guidelines, criteria etc. associated with their financial aid options.

Before contacting financial aid providers, applicants should ensure they have conducted thorough research on expiry closing dates and other specific application conditions. Making calls (in particular) without this vital information could result in uncomfortable or distressing interactions
